Overview

Today's global organizations face threats and risks of unprecedented complexity and scope, including:

- International and Domestic Terrorism
- Global Pandemics
- Weakened Global Economy
- Cyber Stalking
- Identity Theft
- Major Market Fluctuations
- Enterprise-wide Downsizing
- Workplace Violence
- Natural Disasters
- Hostile Mergers & Acquisitions

While all of the categories listed above include characteristics specific to the event itself, they also share at least one common risk factor; left unmanaged, they all have the capacity to financially destroy an organization. The old axiom is true; if you fail to plan...you can plan to fail. The question then is simple; how well prepared is your organization to manage a significant crisis event?
