

Course Description

Building an Effective Project Team AMS115

7 Professional Development Units
7 Education Hours

Overview

In all facets of business and personal life, very few sizeable objectives can be undertaken without the integrated efforts of committed individuals (teams). The ability to build and manage effective and committed teams is nothing short of an art form. Regardless of the position or role you occupy on your team you will benefit from learning how effective and high-performance teams operate and function. This course will help you recognize and apply the concepts and dynamics associated with highly effective project teams. You will learn how to transition from being an individual contributor to a professional, collaborative team player.

Learning Objectives

- Gain Understanding into the Attributes of Effective Teams and Team Members
- Discuss the Inherent Difficulties with Duration and Team Commitment
- Gain Insight into Developing Effective Teamwork as a Choice
- Examine the Keys to Developing A Results Orientation
- Discuss the Natural Dysfunctions of Effective Teamwork
- Discuss the Critical Link of Making and Maintaining Relationships
- Examine the Roles of Leadership, Emotion and Cohesiveness in Building and Leading Teams
- Examine Team Related Project Management Practices

Format

This course is highly interactive and how-to oriented. Discussion of concepts and principles is followed by group exercises or group discussions.

Duration

One Day

Who Should Attend

Individuals who are directly involved with the planning and execution of project related work would benefit by taking this course.