

Course Description

Building Global Leadership Skills: The Journey of Cultural Intelligence AMS2008

7 Education Hours/Online 6

Overview

This program is designed to help organizations raise their level of Cultural Intelligence (CQ), resulting in a more effective Globalization effort. As companies recognize the difference between Global and International, their approach to multicultural needs and management development becomes much more complex. In today's global marketplace, change is rapid, required and always prevalent, Global leaders must work to identify their skills, be adaptive, maintain awareness in various cultures, and then embrace the team and process knowledge to execute against business strategies.

This program will expose participants to the tools and techniques needed to be more effective global leaders and will do so in a scenario based workshop led by executive level practitioners who have experience dealing with Globalization, M&A, Transformational Change and Multicultural/Global team deployment.

After completion of this workshop, participants will be able to:

- Embrace the global mindset of the future
- Assess themselves against a global leader profile
- Effectively manage a team of people from different regions
- Enhance and strengthen team based collaboration throughout global business units
- Implement best practices for effective global communication across cultures
- Manage, deploy and measure global business strategies

Format

This course is highly interactive and adaptive to participants' interests and needs. An experiential and adult learning approach is used and coupled with individual and team exercises. A Case-Based Scenario and Podcast can be offered as pre-work to this workshop.
